

SPORTING Edition

FOUR PAIRS TWINS IN FLOATING HOSPITAL

Four pairs of twins are now enjoying the ocean breeze at the Floating Hospital, three hundred and twenty miles from the coast, in the hospital ship, U. S. S. Albatross, in the harbor of San Francisco, California, today. Every cot was filled before the time for starting, and it was necessary to turn the afternoon session of the hospital over to the next day. Arrangements were made for their accommodation, probably for a week or more, and the twins were paid by the Ellis Island School, Kosbar.

Little Ones Tossed to Safety.

Bright and Ash, who happened to be in the room, were the first to rush to the spring to the aid of the children. Bright picked up the boy and Ash the girl, and both were able to get them to the window in time after another the mother and the nurse had the children waiting down on reaching the little room. Bright found that she had not the strength to carry the child, so she passed through the hatch. Her only hope seemed to be to throw the child out of the window. She pulled him forward looking for a chance to throw him. She was unable to do so, and she was forced to throw him out of the window. The boy was killed on reaching the hatch. The girl was killed on reaching the hatch. The boy with his head against his mother's

[illegible]

Little Ones Tossed to Safety.

Bright and Ash, who happened to be in the room, were the first to rush to the spring to the aid of the children. Bright picked up the boy and Ash the girl, and both were able to get them to the window in time after another the mother and the nurse had the children waiting down on reaching the little room. Bright found that she had not the strength to carry the child, so she passed through the hatch. Her only hope seemed to be to throw the child out of the window. She pulled him forward looking for a chance to throw him. She was unable to do so, and she was forced to throw him out of the window. The boy was killed on reaching the hatch. The girl was killed on reaching the hatch. The boy with his head against his mother's

High tide—7:52 a. m., 10:05 p. m.
Sun rises 4:24, sets 7:17.
Moon rises, 2:45.

NEW YORK, July 19.—On the White Star line steamer Tontona, which arrived this morning from Liverpool and Queens-town, was the body of Mary F. Howson, one of the victims of the recent railroad accident at Salisbury, England.

